The sparkling days in Ontario's "Sun Parlour" are spoiling me. Not only is the weather ideal for this transplanted Torontonians, but campus openness and hospitality coax a smile even on the rare dreary day. Settling in has been . . . um, energetic. Lots to do certainly and as well, planning for the future. Yes, if all goes well, there will be a Homecoming in '77. If you haven't before, make this the autumn you come back.

Why should grads consider a visit? Why do alumni keep in touch? Well, because life evolves in the company of other people and those elusive qualities "happiness" and "fullness" depend on how relationships develop, how well they're maintained, what events occur to shape human experience and whether a sense of personal growth and awareness underscores the random mingling of people, places and time.

The U of W provides a fertile environment for this evolution of the individual and the Windsor years very often prove to be the important period during an individual's experience when the elements of happiness and fullness first become truly discernible.

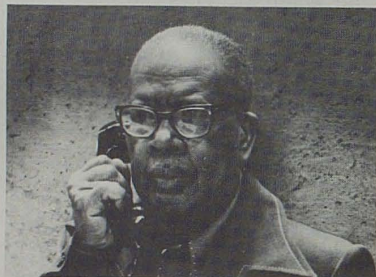

To quietly stroll the campus, maybe to enjoy the beer and mirth, to chat with a favourite professor — all an opportunity to re-explore, reinterpret, recapture. Plan for Homecoming — but drop by any time. We'll be glad to see you. Returning to old friends, revisiting the place and recalling events can serve to reinforce a fine human experience.

BLACK SYMPOSIUM

The Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (O.I.S.E.) and the University of Windsor recently co-sponsored on the Windsor campus "The National Symposium on Multi-Culturalism and the Black Presence in Canada."

Dr. Thomas E. Posey is a Research Associate in the Department of Economics. He is a retired labour economist from the U.S. Foreign Service. Dr. Posey served as General Chairman of the Symposium.

Clarence Bayne, a professor at Montreal's Concordia University and a speaker at the Symposium, asserted that Quebec blacks are totally perplexed by the tensions between French and English speaking segments of the Canadian population. Professor Bayne said that, "in the conflict-oriented relationship" which exists among Canada's diverse cultural groups, blacks are at a disadvantage.

He called for a national black organization to protect the cultural identity of Quebec blacks.

"Blacks have the problem of getting the power that permits us to become involved in determining what this society will be socially and economically", he said. "But you in Ontario and other parts of the country are better off than we in Quebec."

"The Parti Quebecois has said it will never tolerate multiculturalism" he added.

Prof. Bayne explained that Quebec blacks are very concerned about the potential for racism in Bill One — the Quebec language bill — and said blacks are in a weak position when dealing with other cultural groups in the province.

Another contributor to the Symposium, Dr. Lorraine Clarke of British Columbia, addressed the subject "The Black Child in the White Home".

Dr. Clarke maintained that raising a black child in a white environment can be a personality damaging experience for the child.

Dr. Clarke, who adopted a black girl from a broken family seven years ago, said it is extremely difficult to give the child a sense of belonging without singling her out from her other two white children.

She said it is important, but very hard to convince the child that she is the same as the other members of the family even though she is physically different.

Burnley Jones, Director of Dalhousie University's Transitional Year Program, argued at the conference that native Canadian blacks are reacting negatively to the apparent prosperity and well being of immigrant blacks.

Jones's declaration that too many leadership roles in Canada's black community are being taken by immigrants was hotly debated.

Philip Alexander, '63, '65 M.A.Sc., Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering at U. of W., spoke at the opening session of the Symposium.

Dear Mr. Mabley:

I am writing to invite the participation of your alumni in the University of California, Riverside, Alumni Association's Travel Lodge program. The lodge serves as a convenient base of operations where your alumni can stay while visiting Southern California this summer.

Our program would enable your alumni visitors to travel to virtually every major Southern California point of interest while staying in first class accommodations at a fraction of the cost they would spend elsewhere.

The Alumni Travel Lodge is located in facilities used for campus housing during the school year. The complex, called Bannockburn, features suites and apartments for individuals or families, tennis and volleyball courts, a swimming pool, sauna and weight room, barbecue area, laundry facilities, recreation room, sandwich shop and gift shop.

The cost of one week's accommodation at the Alumni Travel Lodge would be $3.72 per person per day for a family of four. Costs would decrease if there were more people in the party. The program is available only to college and university alumni. For more information and a brochure, your alumni can write to Alumni Lodge, UCR Alumni Association, P.O. Box 112, Riverside, Calif. 92506.

Sincerely,

Russell A. Medevic

MEDIA VIOLENCE STIRS UNIVERSITY RESEARCH

J.M. Linton

Professor Jim Linton is a member of Windsor's Department of Communication Studies. A native of St. Catharines, Ontario, he is a graduate of York University and the University of Pennsylvania. His special interest is in the area of film.

Professor Linton explains in his article the contribution of Windsor researchers to the recently published Report of the Ontario Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry.

The Royal Commission sought more research from Windsor than any other university in Ontario.

THE MANDATE

On May 7, 1975, the Ontario Government issued an order in council establishing the Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry (the La Marsh Commission). Appointed to head up the inquiry was lawyer and former Federal Secretary of State, Judy La Marsh. Also appointed as commissioners were Toronto newspaper columnist Scott Young and Family Court Judge Lucien Beaulieu. The panel was "empowered and instructed" to:

- study the effects on society of the increasing exhibition of violence in the communications industry;

- determine if there is any connection or a cause and effect relationship between this phenomenon and the incidence of violent crime in society;

- hold public hearings to enable groups and organizations, individual citizens and representatives of the industry to make known their views on the subject;

- make appropriate recommendations, if warranted, or any measures that should be taken by the Government of Ontario, by other levels of Government, by the general public and by the industry.

The commission accepted as its task the investigation of violence in all popular media. This approach departed from the focus of recent American based studies which have been caught up primarily with TV.

While no one knows for certain exactly how television affects the young, there is a growing concern among parents that screen mayhem must be reduced. The Carnegie Corporation of New York provides these disquieting observations:

- Preschoolers spend more waking hours watching television than on any other activity.

- By age 18, individuals will have logged 15,000 hours in front of television compared to 11,000 hours in school.

- Youngsters are bombarded by commercials an average of one every 2.9 minutes — mainly selling sugar-laden cereals and snacks.

- Television characters are three times more likely to be male than females; when women are visible they tend to be portrayed as incompetent.

- More than six out of ten programs contain some act of violence, and about three in ten are "saturated" with violent acts.

UNIQUE RESEARCH

The uniqueness of the Royal Commission's research programme can perhaps be best demonstrated by comparing it to that of its most recent, and probably most famous predecessor, the U.S. Surgeon

General's study completed in 1971. The Surgeon General's study was concerned solely with television and its impact on American youth. In addition, projects were awarded in a piecemeal fashion, on the basis of research proposals submitted by individual researchers or research teams.

The Ontario Royal Commission, on the other hand, was concerned with the impact of all the present-day media industries (television, film, newspapers, magazines, books, comics, records, rock concerts and live theatre) on citizens of all ages. And rather than the catch-as-catch-can approach of researcher-generated proposals, the Royal Commission designed an overall research framework from which individual projects were extracted. These individual projects were then awarded to researchers competent in particular areas. In addition, the Royal Commission's projects focused on the Canadian situation which, obviously, the Surgeon General's did not.

WINDSOR INVOLVEMENT

The Commission's overall research framework generated twenty-eight separate studies, ranging from the content analysis of television programming to a comparison of the views on violence and the media between institutionalized (prisoners, mental patients, etc.) and non-institutionalized populations. In awarding the research contracts for these projects efforts were extended to utilize Canadian expertise, and Ontario expertise where possible. Nearly a quarter of all the research studies were awarded to faculty members of the University of Windsor. Communication Studies Faculty were involved in five of the six projects. Other Windsor researchers were attached to Economics, Psychology and Human Kinetics.

GOVERNMENT vs MEDIA

Dr. Garth Jowett, Penny Reath and Monica Schouten of Communication Studies produced a historical study which examined various methods and attempts to control the content of mass entertainment media in Canada, the U.S., and Great Britain over the last four hundred years. The media selected for examination were popular literature, radio, comic books and motion pictures. They found that there seems to be a fairly common pattern of the response to the introduction of new entertainment media. Viewed as threats to the existing order, the media agree to establish an internal self-regulatory organization in order to avoid imposed government control. Increasing economic pressures make sex and violence attractive ingredients, however, and more pressure is applied for government involvement. Such a situation establishes a conflict between the media's perceived "freedom of speech" and government's perceived responsibility to protect the citizenry from harmful materials.

FILM VIOLENCE

Windsor researchers discovered that the level of violence in films seems to have doubled in the last twenty years, but varies according to production source, popularity level and film type: non-Canadian films are more violent than Canadian ones, not-so-popular more violent than popular ones, and action films more violent than non-action ones. The world which these films portray is populated by basically stereotypical characters who engage in large numbers of conflicts which are almost invariably terminated violently.

The economic determinants of violence in feature films and television were studied by Professor Hugh Edmunds of Communication Studies and Dr. John Strick of Economics. They discovered that vertical integration through production-distribution-exhibition in the two industries and the economics of scale associated with larger companies, make Anglophone Canada basically part of a North American market dominated by the U.S. As a result, for Canadian production to be economically competitive, it must be funded, distributed, exhibited and even patterned after the U.S. content. Consequently, if U.S. content contains excessive violence, this is the content to which Canadians will be exposed. They conclude that changing this situation implies restructuring the Canadian broadcasting and feature film marketing and exhibition system, unless changes take place in the U.S.

WIRE SERVICE

Professor Andrew Osler studied the role of Canadian Press (CP) in Ontario. While it was discovered that CP places extraordinary emphasis upon the importance of Toronto as the main news hub, there is a heavy local element in both TV and newspaper news, with wire service material being used very little considering the amount available. He also found that there is little duplication of content among the new media, although thematic similarities did emerge, violence being a powerful common element. And although news appears with less frequency the further one moves geographically from the point of publication/broadcast, the level of violence intensifies markedly with distance.

SPORTS AND MEDIA

Dr. Ann McCabe of Psychology and Mr. Dick Moriarty of Human Kinetics studied the impact of pro-and anti-social behaviour models on children and adolescents in selected sport/athletic activities. Their results indicate that exposure to pro-social media increases the level of pro-social behaviour and of symbolic (as opposed to physical) aggression. Levels of physical aggression were not found to exhibit any consistent relationships with media exposure. Individuals studied indicated that they watched a considerable amount of television (concentrated in the evening hours), and preferred sports, cartoons, situation comedy programmes. No reliable changes in the perception of violence as a result of exposure were recorded.

The Commission will publish its report in June. Whatever its proposals — and they will be radical — the direction for change will have been importantly influenced by the energies of communication scholars, teachers, consultants from the U. of W.

Kitchener/Waterloo — Guelph — Cambridge Golf Tournament Planned

Don Kasta, David Butler and Tony Keller are now heading up a search for an appropriate country club location. The proposed date: a weekday in early August.

There is a standing challenge to all Hamilton, Toronto and Windsor golfers to attend and show their stuff.

U. of W.'s CAN-AM SEMINAR STUDIES HEALTH CARE

J. Alex Murray

Dr. J. Alex Murray [B.A. '58] directed the 1976 CAN-AM Seminar and is a full professor in the Faculty of Business Administration. Dr. Murray is presently on sabbatical leave at the University of California, Los Angeles [UCLA].

The 18th annual Canadian-American Seminar, which was held at the University of Windsor in the fall, focused on the topic "Health Care Delivery Systems in North America: The Changing Concepts." It brought together experts from Canada and the United States who debated the issues of health care. The program consisted of five panel presentations which explored such areas as the evolution in the structure and administration of health care systems, its financing, and its relationship to the community.

For example, despite our sophisticated medical technology, it has been difficult to determine precisely what the community needs are. Science frequently is at a loss to explain why there is a rise in the number of cancer cases, and a decrease in heart and respiratory disease. Yet questions such as these must be answered in a systematic manner in order to predict properly the kind of care that North Americans need.

Another major problem in the health care field is that it is becoming increasingly more expensive. In the United States, for example, the health care program is the most costly in the world, and it accounts for an expenditure of $2,000 annually for each American family. Much of this is needless spending because there are duplication of efforts, overabundant use of hospitals, and the costs associated with the fear of malpractice litigation. In Canada, the development of an extensive network of hospitals has resulted in a rapid rise in the cost of medical care. Although economic barriers no longer exist which prevent Canadians from obtaining health care, it is not always readily available or of a superior quality.

Family Medicine

Some of the answers to the health care dilemma are the decentralization of health care, a decrease in the use of hospitals, and a return of health services to the neighbourhood. A new kind of specialty labelled "family medicine" has re-established the importance of the family doctor who can treat the patient within the context of one's family history. Such a specialist is of great value to the community. Because he deals with health problems on a day-to-day basis, he is a good source of information on the health status and the health care needs of the community. In the United States, legislation has made provisions for some two hundred health system agencies throughout the country. Each agency has a governing body which is made up of the providers of health care as well as consumers who represent the social, economic, linguistic, and racial mixes in the population.

In Ontario, as well, considerable attention is being paid to decentralizing health care and returning it to the neighbourhoods. This allows the community to be cognizant of the plans and desires of the central government and to have input into the decision making process. As of today some sixty-five percent of Ontario's population is now being served by District Health Councils. The hope is that these Councils will help hold down the spiraling costs of health care, as well as to maintain the quality of care to which Canadians are now accustomed.

Medicine and the Law

The medical/legal interface is another area of concern for health care consumers and providers. In the United States the cost of insurance covering professional negligence or malpractice has skyrocketed to such an extent that some kind of alternative is necessary. One solution is the institution of a benefit plan for patients which is structured like Workmen's Compensation. Such a plan would adequately provide payment for additional treatment and care, loss of income, permanent disability, and death.

The situation in Canada is different from that in the United States. Malpractice litigation is not highly prevalent in Canada. A Canadian who wishes to engage in a malpractice suit learns that if he loses, he is responsible for paying all court costs and all expenses. This system frequently deters a patient from rightly pursuing legal action.

Preventive Medicine

Preventive medicine is an important area of health care delivery which was emphasized by many speakers. The public must be educated about the causes of illness and diseases and must be told how they can be avoided. Loss of life in Canada is attributed primarily to such things as motor vehicle accidents, heart disease, respiratory disease, lung cancer, and suicide. Such causes of death are more related to the social and physical environment and to the personal habits of citizens, than to any faults in our health care systems. The salient point is that we all share in the responsibilities of health care whether we are health care consumers or providers.

Alumna to Head 1977 CAN-AM Seminar

Professor Mary Gerace (B.A. '65, M.A. '67) of the Department of Communication Studies will direct the 19th annual CAN-AM Seminar. The Seminar will take place on the Windsor campus November 10th and 11th. Participants will address the topic: "Accountability and Responsibility in North American Communication Systems — Future Perspective."

FOCUS 1977

The focus of the '77 Seminar will be on developments in communication technologies; technologies that have quickly thrust man into a post industrial era. This calls for a re-evaluation of the established functions of the corporate, industrial, and political organizations in North America.

The impact of such innovations as broadband communications and the consequent erasing of national boundaries created by communication satellites are already being felt. The implementation of these and other new technologies is reshaping societies which find themselves inadequately equipped to handle the increasingly more sophisticated communication systems.

It is important that business, government, research institutions and the courts do not restrict themselves to playing traditional roles in the attempt to co-ordinate North American communication systems, in light of such technological developments. The need has evolved to predict more clearly the social impact of these new technologies, to formulate new policies to put them to optimum use, and to evolve more acceptable means of regulating them.

SPRING CONVOCATION

Spring Convocation — the largest in University of Windsor history — proved an unqualified success as more than 2,000 alumni were added to the rolls. Apart from size, the event was unique in that a fourth session was added to what has become the normal three-session weekend.

This fourth session was one postponed from Fall, 1976, when an industrial dispute on campus forced the delay. It was remarkable from two points of view. One was that 125 graduands elected to come back to take part. They had received their degrees in the fall, as it was obviously not practical to hold them up, and were settled in post-university life, yet Convocation meant enough to bring them back. At least one graduand travelled from Europe to participate in the ceremony.

The fourth session was also remarkable in the person of the speaker and honorary graduand, Col. Frederick A. Tilston, V.C., one of the best-known and respected citizens in Canadian pharmacy and the recipient of the nation's highest honor for military heroism.

Other recipients of honorary degrees at the other sessions were distinguished and varied. The arts were represented by musician and composer Murray Adaskin and painter William Kurelek; the church by Most Rev. G. Emmett Carter, Bishop of London; community service by Mrs. R.W. Todgham and Dr. David Reid Brown, Executive Director, Windsor Western Hospital, and education by Dr. John B. Macdonald, president of the Addiction Research Foundation and the retiring president of the University of Western Ontario, Dr. D.C. Williams.

A respected principle of "Murphy's Law" tells us that "nothing is as easy as it looks". According to Dr. D. Carlton Williams, President of the University of Western Ontario, this maxim is especially relevant to the role of a University President.

Dr. Williams retires this year from Western after ten years service. His many contributions to higher education were recognized at Windsor's Spring Convocation with the award of an honorary degree. He took the occasion to deliver a witty and perceptive address on what it means to be the president of a university. Following is a partial text of his remarks.

In casting about for something to say to you — and knowing all too well how ephemeral such addresses are — I decided against the launching of yet another crusade to save the country. There are so many of them springing up, each in its own baliwick, that all are in danger of becoming separatist approaches to unity. I also decided against telling you that you stood on the threshold of a world of opportunity. Actually your situation is rather more like that which Dr. Leddy and I found in the 30s when the only thing the Canadian universities were unanimous about was that they had no need for our services. Well, they saw the light eventually, even as your employers-to-be will for you.

Since I will retire in a month and since Dr. Leddy will follow me a year hence, I thought instead to tell you something of what it is like to be a President. If I had to give it a title, I would call it, "The Unmasking of a President".

I recall vividly the freshman of years ago who accosted me saying, "I know you're the President, but what do you do?" When I replied, "I run the place." (Hardly an accurate statement, but you have to say something), he persisted with "But what do you do when you 'run the place'?" Well, here, years too late to help him, but perhaps of some passing interest to you, is what a President actually does. I say of interest, because after all many of you will find yourselves President of something, be it The University of Windsor or its chief competitor for fame, Mr. Hiram Walker's emporium, or some other venture between these extremes.

I recall two comments by two Presidents of an eminent university to the south of which you will have heard. President Holyoke said, "If any man wishes to be humbled and mortified, let him become President of Harvard College." The other was a comment by President Eliot, he who immediately on his appointment, revolutionized university education on this continent with his concept of elective courses. When he outlined the benefits of this system to the Faculty of Medicine, an elderly Professor of Surgery rose acidly to remark that Harvard had taught medicine without these dubious benefits for 80 years and could Mr. Eliot tell him why they should change? "The reason is simple", Eliot shot back, "Harvard has a new President".

Today, Presidents identify with Holyoke and look back with envy to Eliot as a symbol of presidential power long vanished. Clark Kerr, a former President of the University of California (He who said he left his work as he began it, "Fired with enthusiasm") used to say that today the power of the President is the power to persuade. It follows that in order to exercise that power you have to have equal access to all those who need persuading.

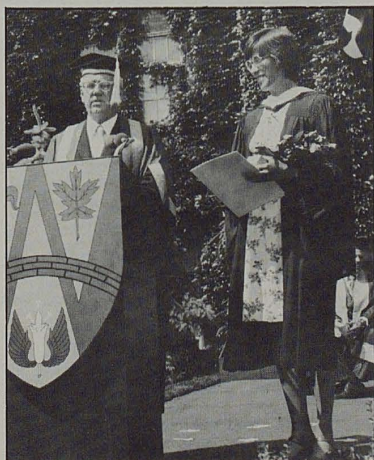

[l to r] William Kurelek, D. Carlton Williams, Murray Adaskin and Chancellor The Hon. Lucien Lamoureux meet in the University Centre prior to convocation ceremonies. Chancellor Lamoureux is presently Canadian Ambassador to Belgium and Luxembourg.

Dr. J. Francis Leddy [front] and Col. Frederick A. Tilston, V.C.

The winner of the Governor General's Medal for outstanding academic achievement, Miss Caroline Caira, is recognized by President Leddy.

Government, in short, is always with the consent of the governed. In democracies we prefer persuasion, in non-democracies, terror and coercion are often preferred.

One of the catches in this simple seeming formula is that of having to persuade people who pursue mutually contradictory courses.

President Coleman of Haverford College put this dilemma well and wittily when he summarized the presidential dilemma as follows: "I know how lucky I am to be President here. I can cite more instances of pure joy from these years than from anything else I have done. But this job can beat a man down. There is no way to survive it without a sense of humor.

"Organization charts show the President on top, just a step below the financial angels. In actuality, a President is at the centre of a web of conflicting interest groups, none of which can ever be fully satisfied. He is, by definition, almost always wrong. If he spends much time meeting with students, he is neglecting the Faculty. If he spends much time with the Faculty, he is being dictated to by them. If he is off campus, he should be back minding the store. If he is on campus, he should be out raising money. If he pushes his pet education thoughts, he is trying to run the show. If he doesn't, he is not interested enough in education. If he changes his mind on an issue, he is wishy-washy. If he doesn't, he is pigheaded. If his name isn't in the paper, he is letting the University down. If it is, he is a publicity hound. If he smiles a lot, he is naive on the problems of the University. If he frowns, he has given up too soon. It's all very interesting and not hard to take once he gets over wanting to be right and settles instead for doing the best he can."

This leads me to disclose to you Williams first law of university administration, which runs as follows: "You can't win." What this means is that you are not in a popularity contest, that almost everything you do will have a majority against you in the nature of the case, and that your power to persuade will be taxed to the utmost daily. What it also means is, since you cannot hope to persuade everyone, you must settle for doing what you think is right, not what you think will be popular.

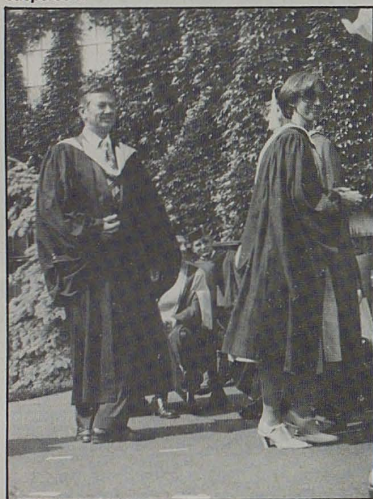

When I first became President ten years ago, the image that kept recurring to me was that of a ship carried downstream in a swift current, unable even to stop as I leaped aboard, grasped the tiller and tried to steer a course whose shoals and dangers I knew little or nothing about. What this image means is that in times of rapid change, there is no time to put off decision making so that principles can be debated in leisurely fashion. To delay is to decide negatively. It is better to make a decision on principles you know to be out of date and soon replaced than to decide by default.

This is not to deny that extended thought and effort must be made in revising outworn concepts, getting them debated, and put in place. It is just to emphasize that while this debate is going on, decisions have to be made on the basis of existing principles. For example: As you know each university derives its legal power from an Act of the provincial legislature. In 1971 we struck a Committee to revise the existing UWO Act. My point is, it took us three full years to get the new Act revised and in place. So from 1971 to 1974 we had to govern ourselves by the old Act, even though we ourselves knew how much that Act would be changed.

Art Weingarden '54, smiles after hooding his wife, Madelyn. Mrs. Weingarden received her B.A. at the Spring Exercises.

So Presidents have power to persuade and are forced to make decisions, often with inadequate information and on the basis of out of date concepts. What else? They must also act as honest brokers, or catalysts, bringing together disparate elements of the University and finding common ground for them to agree on. On occasion they must also act as tie-breakers, as in the case where two strong deans are set on mutually exclusive courses of action. Such dissension in the ranks is a sign of health, of independence of mind, of creative imagination and high motivation. No one ever said everything would yield to sweet reason. As Lord Ashby put it, "we talk about a University as a community dedicated to the preservation, advancement and transmission of knowledge. There is some truth in this romantic scene, but we cannot pretend that all is sweetness and light in the community of scholars."

Ashby goes on with this valuable insight for Presidents, "Always remember," he says, "that in the eyes of professors, all administrators are evil. Look at yourself in the mirror every morning as you shave and say, 'I am an evil; am I a necessary one?'"

In addition to all of this, the President is the front man for the University — its spokesman, required to be a lion in its defence abroad and a lamb in its administration at home. He it is who receives the blame when things go wrong, be the complainers members of his own staff or of the outside community. All are eager to share his authority, but are unanimous that the responsibility be his alone.

The physical requirements for this part of his work are a zinc-lined stomach and an ability to stand for hours without showing signs of fatigue. If you don't like tonic water when you begin, you will before you end'.

Finally, he is required to provide moral leadership for the University — to stand up for it, defend it against attack — not an easy thing to do when the attack frequently comes from within. He it is who must be able to conceptualize the morals of academe and state them in a manner that will convince his many publics, internal and external that he knows what he is talking about.

Now it is needless to add that no one does all these things equally well. But it is true that they are there, waiting for decisions, be they by default or not, be they done well or done ill, done too often, or not often enough, done with style and grace or done grudgingly and with reluctance.

It will by now be obvious that these problems are not confined to University Presidents. You too, will face these challenges in one form or another. Even though they appear more sharply etched and press more urgently on a President, they arise to a greater or lesser degree in every human relationship, so each of you will find yourselves coping with them, whatever you do.

On the subject of presidencies . . . An administrator reports he was invited to apply for the presidency of Lewis University and received a questionnaire from the search committee that asked, among other things, "How do you see the University mission?"

"Next to the nunnery," our friend says he was tempted to reply.

Money, Money, Money

An Iowa legislator has figured that his state could send the 53,000 students now attending its three public universities to England's Oxford University — picking up the tab for their tuition and their transatlantic air fares — for $62.1 million less than it will spend to educate them at home.

ALUMNI TRIBUTE TO SECOND UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT GROWS

Following the announcement in the winter "Alumni Times" that Dr. J.F. Leddy will retire in 1978, many Windsor alumni and friends expressed a wish to demonstrate their appreciation of Dr. Leddy's 14 years of leadership service to the University. Out of this wish has grown the Dr. J.F. Leddy Portrait Fund. Dr. Leddy's portrait will be placed in the University Library — shortly to be named the Leddy Library.

Alumni donations are now being raised for the Portrait Fund. The names of all donors will be displayed in a handsome record.

Welcome:

Come back to your university home for a visit. You'll find enormous vitality. In the decade since I graduated, Windsor has experienced phenomenal physical growth. The law building, the library, the mathematics building, and other additions have brought increased strength to the programs of the University. But the campus still has quiet lanes and study corners for a refreshing break from the commercial hum of the city. If you come back for Homecoming you'll see what I mean.

I would suggest that you plan to attend the Alumni Scholarship Luncheon on October 8th. There you can enjoy a pleasant meal with friends before the football game and also meet outstanding student scholars, the recipients of alumni honor.

The annual meeting will be held in the spring this year rather than at Homecoming — a break from tradition. In the works also for the Spring is a banquet to honor outstanding alumni and friends of the University. The ambition is to establish at least two big on-campus occasions annually for alumni. Those that take up the invitation to return will quickly find reasons for pride in Alma Mater.

Serving on the Alumni Association, I see time and again that this is a splendid community to be part of. I encourage you to participate and test out your own feelings.

Connie Clarkson '67

President, University of Windsor Alumni Association

A Message to Business Alumni:

On behalf of the Faculty of Business Administration, I extend a warm invitation to you to attend the 1977 Homecoming. It will be a time to reminisce and reflect, but also to view a changing campus scene, changes especially affecting Business education.

There will be those who will remember the single office in the Memorial Science Building which housed the ten four faculty members (Horne, Duval, Halstead and Zin). There will be those who will fondly remember the "Business House" that was "home" from the end of 1956 to 1967. There will be graduates from the Windsor Hall decade. And there will be present day students who are witnessing the building of the first non-makeshift home for the Faculty. The building is progressing rapidly and Homecoming will present an opportunity for you to examine progress — it's a building that will ultimately include the latest in classroom design and computer equipment.

Enough about the building — you will see for yourself. For now start making plans to attend, much more will be unfolded in good company and to the clicking of glasses. That I promise you.

See you at the Homecoming '77.

Michael Zin (1955)

Dean, Faculty of Business Administration

CHAPTER AND CLASS EVENTS

Rochester, N. Y. Tom Prinzing is contacting area alumni to arrange a cocktail reception in September. John Mabley, U. of W.'s new Director of Alumni Affairs, will be introduced to chapter members at the event.

Rochester graduates at the Spring '77 exercises were Karen Cometa, Mary Ann DiBiase, Theresa Hildebrand, Sheila Innes, Margaret Keller, John McGee, Paul McGee and Michelle Michael.

Ottawa Doug Brombal and Brian Kennelly report from Ottawa that it's a city of changing faces. Windsor alumni come and go from the capital at a wondrous clip they say. So to bring all the newcomers in touch with the small cadre of old hands a get acquainted reception will be held at Carleton University in October.

Doug Brombal is Director of Administrative Services at Carleton.

Alumni newly arrived to Ottawa include: William Kort, Terry G. Pegler and Jeffrey L. Price. Have we missed anyone?

SOCIAL WORK ALUMNI MEET

The U. of W. School of Social Work hosted a reception for alumni and friends at the Annual Conference of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies held in June at York University.

Social Work Professor Mae Harman expressed her appreciation to the Alumni Association for its support of the York do and added that "these occasions have provided an opportunity for the renewal of old contacts and catching up on developments at the School".

Social Work alumni pitched in at Spring Commencement to assist faculty with a reception held at Iona College for the graduating class, their parents and friends.

CANTERBURY COLLEGE CELEBRATES 20th ANNIVERSARY

Canterbury College provides residence facilities for 138 U. of W. students and serves as the Anglican Chaplaincy to the campus.

The Rev. de Wahl will formally begin his visit on November 4th with a Founder's Day Eucharist at Assumption University Chapel. The Founder's Day Dinner will be held in the Ambassador Auditorium of the University Centre beginning at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10.00 each. Details available from Canterbury College, 172 Patricia Road, Windsor, N9B 3B9. Telephone 519-256-6442.

On Saturday, November 5th, the College will host an Open House for all alumni and friends.

IMMIGRATION RULES TIGHTENED FOR PROFESSORS.

The Federal Department of Manpower and Immigration now requires universities that want to hire foreign professors to demonstrate that they first tried to recruit Canadians.

New federal regulations will make it almost impossible for foreign professors to immigrate to Canada unless they already have a job.

The number of foreigners, particularly Americans, in the Canadian professoriate has been a matter of concern for several years. Approximately one-third of the faculty members at Canadian universities are from other countries, 15% from the U.S. According to 1975-76 data 27.6% of U. of W. professors are American. 4.9% hold British citizenship.

Large numbers of foreigners were hired during the 1960's, when the universities were expanding rapidly. Now, however, some Ph.D's graduating from Canadian universities are having difficulty finding work.

According to Ralph Gerard, director of immigrant selection policy in the immigration department, the department will now assign no points for availability of employment to a professor who does not have a job before attempting to immigrate. An immigrant must have a certain number of points to be admitted to Canada and the largest share of points is for availability of employment. The change "eliminates one of the channels by which foreign academics come and compete for scarce jobs", Mr. Gerard said. In recent years, he said, approximately one in every three professors admitted to Canada did not have "a firm job offer".

The present U.S. policy is even more restrictive than the Canadian. It demands a university to demonstrate that no qualified American is available for a job before it can hire someone from Canada or another foreign country.

The Spring "Alumni Times" listed Michael R. Goldhawk '72, Mississauga, Ontario as deceased. Our information was in error. Mr. Goldhawk is alive and well in London, Ontario. We regret any embarrassment caused to Mr. Goldhawk and his family by our mistake.

OUR COVER

The summer is a great time for shutterbugging and the Alumni Times provides evidence of that in this issue. On the cover from l. to r. we see Jim Minello after retrieving his ball at the annual Basketball Lancers Alumni Golf Tournament. Pretty Marta Felicia DeLuca added a charming touch to the alumni farewell party hosted by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Armando DeLuca, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holliday. Mr. Holliday was the Registrar at Windsor for 9 years and also served as Acting Director of Alumni Affairs for a time. The Alumni Board donated a gift of books to the Leddy Library as a tribute to Mr. Holliday's unselfish support of the Alumni Association. Windsor drama students Jim Warren, Tom McCamus and drama alumnus Alec Stockwell relax on the stairs of London's Mini-Theatre where they participated in a series of plays this summer.

Tom's Roots

Not long ago a great brouhaha exploded over the birthplace of the telephone. Boston, Massachusetts, a city that has cradled its good share of genius — determined that the telephone belonged in its history. The boast didn't go unchallenged for long. For as every Ontario school-child has been told little Brantford, Ontario is the place where the cerebral Scot, Alexander Graham Bell, struck upon the phone. Brantford and Boston squared off. Claim and counter claim flew across the international border.

Probably both cities can rightfully share in the history of Bell's invention. Science and technology tends to work that way. One small advance is added to another. An apparatus is steadily refined and improved. An invention is not "found" like a spider under a rock.

Within the context of this evolutionary theory the Alumni Times recognizes the 100th anniversary of Thomas Edison's invention of the phonograph. No, Thomas Edison wasn't from Brantford. But Edison, and his family before him, did know something about southwestern Ontario. This is a small part of the story then of the man behind the phonograph and his life in Canada and the United States.

Edison of course also invented the electric light bulb but in this age of "brown outs" and even "black outs" we won't commemorate the bulb this year. Edison might be led to conclude that we've fumbled the results of his genius pretty badly if only he could see us now in Boston, Brantford or . . . New York.

Thomas Edison's great grandfather, John Edison, began life in the New World as a farmer in Caldwell, New Jersey. While he might have become a prosperous landowner, Edison remained a staunch Tory when the American Revolution began and was forced to flee to Canada.

Among the family members taking refuge in Nova Scotia was his oldest son, Samuel Ogden Edison, later to be known as Captain Sam. Born in 1768, in New Jersey, Captain Sam played a pivotal role in the family development.

After 28 years in Nova Scotia, Sam Edison either received or was awarded 600 acres of pineland along the Otter River, two miles inland from Lake Erie.

Taking the entire clan, now numbering 19, including his seven year old son, Sam Jr., Captain Sam set off to reach the wild lands of Ontario. After a summer of travel they reached their land and built a sturdy log cabin in early fall of 1811.

Less than six months after reaching their new home, word reached Sam Edison that war had been declared between the United States and Canada. Edison volunteered to raise a company and became a Captain of the First Middlesex Regiment.

After the surrender of Detroit to Canadian forces, Captain Sam and his men were permitted to return home to provide for their families.

In 1816, with much of the land cleared and vestiges of civilization showing in the rugged Ontario countryside, Captain Sam built a house. When he completed the task, people came from miles around to see the results.

Captain Sam built in Vienna, Ontario between Hamilton and St. Thomas, the Homestead was the first clapboard house to be constructed in the area.

Captain Sam had the window glass and nails brought in from Hamilton — no little task with the roads in bad shape. The framing itself used no nails. All the fastening was done with wooden pins. The posts were mortised into the sills and cross timbers were mortised into the posts. Even the sheathing under the siding was tongued and grooved by hand.

In 1933 the Edison Homestead was moved lock, stock and barrel by Henry Ford to Greenfield Village, Dearborn, Michigan.

It was in this house in 1828 that Samuel Edison, Junior, married Nancy Elliott. The Sunday parlor where the ceremony took place is furnished today with period pieces, many donated by Edison family members.

Sam, Jr., was a bit of a political radical. In 1837, he became involved in William Lyon MacKenzie's plot to overthrow the Canadian government. With Federals on his trail, Sam escaped to the United States across the frozen St. Clair River while his stepmother sidetracked his pursuers by acting as though the young man was hiding in the root cellar. A milk shed now stands in the village where the cellar had been at that time.

Once in the United States, Sam, Jr., set up shop as a lumber and feed dealer in Milan, Ohio, and sent for his wife. It was here, in 1847, that Thomas Alva Edison was born.

As a child, Thomas Edison visited his grandfather's home in Vienna several times. The inquisitive Edison was even found once at a neighbour's trying to hatch some eggs by sitting on them.

By 1860, the house was enlarged to its present size. It now consists of a kitchen, two bedrooms, Sunday parlor, everyday parlor and woodshed downstairs and two bedrooms upstairs.

A walk through the house — open to visitors at Greenfield Village — shows a number of Empire and Victorian period pieces, reflecting the pleasant, open atmosphere of the Edison Homestead, one of Ontario's earliest clapboard houses

... More Sports

Sharon McNamara, a native of Ottawa, established a first for Lancerette sports last year by winning the first "W" plaque ever awarded to a U. of W. female athlete. Sharon won her award on the basis of her first place finish in the javelin event in Ontario women's intercollegiate track and field competition. She was also a member of the Lancerette volleyball team coached by alumna Marg (Holman) Prpich '69.

The "W" plaque is awarded by the University Athletic Department to varsity teams and individuals capturing a league championship.

U. of W. "W" awards for men were presented to members of the golf, curling and sabre fencing teams, in recognition of their OUAA championship wins. On the golf team were Dan Lewis, Mike Niziolek, Jim Garvie, Bill Cowie, Robert Andrews and Mike Riordan. Bill Miles was the coach. Doug Bakes coached curlers Mike Deley, Rand DeRooy, Rand McIntosh and Alec Pinchin. The fencing team included Rainer Weishaar, Bernie Gorski and Ron Taggart and was coached by Murray MacKay.

The DeMarco Trophy is awarded each year to the male and female who best combine scholarship and athletics. Irene Kwasnicki was the women's recipient and Greg Wood took it for the men. Irene earned top grades in the Social Work program and has played intercollegiate volleyball for 3 years. She was selected the best volleyballer in 1975 and again in 1976. She also served as team captain and co-captain in 1975 and 1976 respectively. Greg Wood is a graduate of the honours Human Kinetics program and last year continued his excellent record of scholarship in the Faculty of Education. Greg played football for 5 years and won Western Division all-star status as a Lancer.

The Dave West Memorial Award is given annually to the outstanding student administrators in men's and women's sports. Brad O'Hara, manager of the Lancer basketball team, was the men's recipient and Anne Marie LaMantia who was freshman manager of the Lancerette Volleyball team was the women's recipient.

The Banner Shield, presented annually to the outstanding all around female athlete, was won by Angie MacDonald. A sophomore Human Kinetics student, Angie competed in track and field and basketball. She was the highest point getter for the basketball team.

Charlie Pearsall was awarded the President's Shield for 1976-77. The Shield is presented annually by Dr. J.F. Leddy to the University's outstanding male athlete. Charlie was captain of the Lancer basketball team that last year included North Carolina State University, and Notre Dame University on its schedule. He was elected a Western Division all-star and later was asked to join Canada's national basketball team. He played with the national team in June on campus at St. Denis Hall when the nationals defeated the national team of Israel.

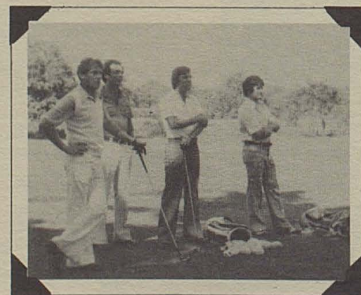

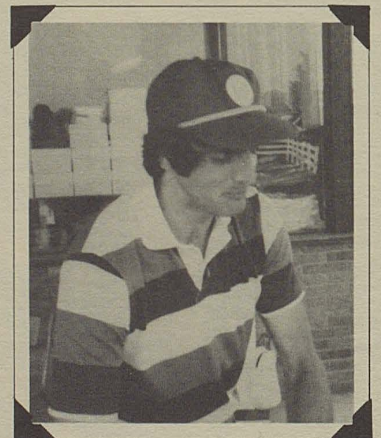

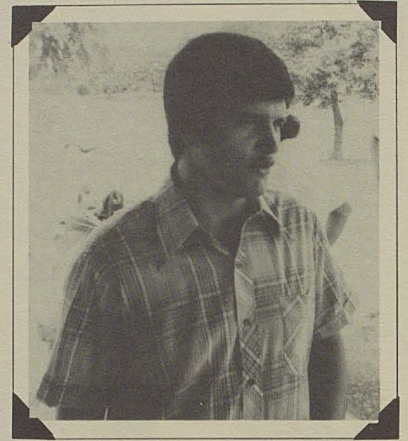

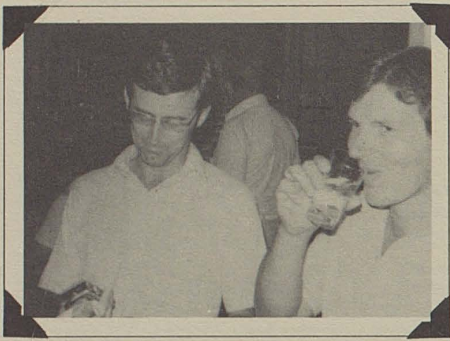

Alumni play an active role in the U. of W. athletic program and last year three graduates received special recognition for their contributions. Peter Carlesimo and Abe Shapiro, former Lancer footballers, have continued their association with the game as volunteer timers for all home football games. Peter and Abe are enthusiastic teachers and athletic coaches in the Windsor school system.

Randy Johnson carved an extraordinarily active record for himself on campus. Randy was an officer in the student government and also served as manager of the basketball Lancers for 3 years. During the visits of the Czech and Swedish basketball teams in 1976 he helped to organize and execute hundreds of duties large and small necessary to generate harmony and good will.

Randy, this summer, accepted a position at Algoma University College in Sault Ste. Marie where he was named Assistant Registrar and Information Officer.

Alumni Golf Days

LOTEs, Lancers of the Thomas era, turned out in force again this year for their annual golf tournament. Professor Paul Thomas took the occasion to announce his players "the finest group of young gentlemen athletes in the country". The gentlemen basked briefly in the admiration and then declared Coach Thomas to be "the finest mature basketball mind in the country".

Education graduate Ed Dragan took the low gross prize and launched into a stroke by stroke accounting of his victory — he was removed from the stage. Jim Minello who will enter Windsor's Faculty of Education this fall took the low net prize.

Next year the LOTE's vow they will invite BTL's, Before Thomas Lancers, to participate in the tournament. One or 2 LOTE's recommended that ambulance service be available for faint BTL's.

Almost 80 Windsor and Detroit area alumni golfers and friends gathered at the Kingsville Golf and Country Club in August. The chapter tournament was revived by JOE SASO and GABE DeLUCA this year at the insistence of S. ALASTAIR WRIGHT and other keen area golfers. RAY KNIGHT was the alumni low gross winner with a very hot 70. BILL BURLING was the alumni low net champ with 62. Guest winners were CLIFF WALLS of Windsor who shot 74 for best low gross and REV. BOB HOWELL also of Windsor with a low net score of 65. Alumnus PAUL BONDY bravely admitted to being the most honest golfer of the day.

Waterloo-Wellington alumni golfers and nosherers shared a delightful day in August at Guelph's Cutten Club course and later at the home of DAVID BUTLER. DAVID, DON KASTA and TONY KELLER co-chaired the golf day and used every clever gambit known including announcements in area newspapers to rein in participants from all over Southern Ontario including PETER ELCOMBE from Toronto, TIM DOYLE from Hamilton, WAYNE CADOTTE from Chatham and MARG FULLER from Windsor. Delicious quantities of salad, steak bar-b-q style, and spirits were served up.

In a mood of mellow generosity all participants declared themselves winners. Accordingly, all received U. of W. prize mugs.

OLGA MURRAY and SR. FRANCES ORDWAY answered the call in Waterloo-Wellington for all interested golfers to attend. This action was generally recognized as a challenge to lady golfers in other chapters to also support alumnae golf days.

Acting Up

Outside, huge trucks lumber in and out of the brewery yard. The sudden booming honk of an air horn barges through the tiny theatre and a knot of apprentice actors and actresses share the accustomed cue to break briefly from their rehearsal. New York it's not!

The location is London, Ontario, and the young performers are University of Windsor drama students preparing, under the direction of Alec Stockwell, a Windsor alumnus, for their interpretation of "Fortune in Men's Eyes".

"Windsor drama students are making quite an impression in London these days" asserts Tom McCamus, a London native who for the past three summers has joined with other U. of W. students to provide a total of eleven plays at London's Mini-Theatre — a slightly rundown neighbour to the Labatt's fortune.

This summer the troupe decided on a prison theme for their plays. Along with "Fortune", Megan Terry's "Keep Tightly Closed in a Cool Dry Place" and Genet's "Deathwatch" were also included on the playbill. Bob LaChance and Jim Warren have joined with McCamus in the major roles.

Audience turnout has been unpredictable, so to make ends meet the students serve as teachers from 9 to 5. They instruct movement and the rudiments of acting to a select group of ambitious London high school students under a small government grant. "Some of these kids will go to Windsor. We've sort of talked up the B.F.A. program" points out McCamus.

According to Jim Warren, a native of Thunder Bay, "the Windsor troupe has settled in London because free theatre space has simply been unavailable in Windsor".

Alec Stockwell who has acted and directed professionally ever since departing from the Windsor program in the early 70's says of his "Fortune in Men's Eyes" cast, "they're immensely talented. It's a shame that Windsor apparently can't provide the summer facilities needed to keep these extraordinary people there year 'round".

Up the street at the "Centre Stage" more Windsor students — Pat Lindsay and the Young Canada Players — are offering Londoners another taste of summer drama. Helping crippled children through drama is one of the daytime projects of the "Players".

Tom McCamus and Jim Warren allow that "while getting by is tough, we're learning how to scrounge and to be awfully practical in these conditions". This School of Hard Knocks won't provide the sought after B.F.A. but its probably as effective a way as any to make learning an exciting, emotional experience.

ALUMNA A HIT AT CANNES

From Windsor drama student, to the Shaw Festival, to critical acclaim in films. Since studying at the U. of W. in the late 60's, Hollis McLaren has moved very quickly.

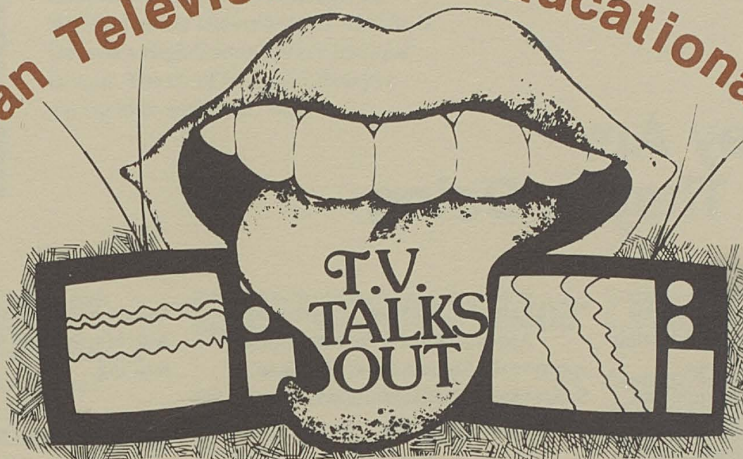

Miss McLaren's first role was in "Sunday in the Country", a film made in 1972 starring Ernest Borgnine and J. Michael Pollard. But it is her latest film "Outrageous" — made in Canada — that seems certain to catapult her into star ranks.

"Outrageous" describes the friendship between a once-committed schizophrenic (McLaren) and a homosexual drag queen (Craig Russell). The film created a stir at the recent Cannes Film Festival and led to a full blown New York Times interview with critic Rex Reed for Miss McLaren. Reed doted on McLaren's tenderness and charm. Charles Champlin of the Los Angeles Times called her "a dazzling young actress".

New found fame has not, however, swept Miss McLaren off her feet. This summer she performed on the stage in North Bay. And up until now she has frequently taken substitute teaching jobs to supplement her income from acting.

Can Television Be Educational?

You can't blame television people in Canada for feeling a little beleaguered these days. Of course there are the ongoing charges that television

"hasn't met its potential". The Canadian Radio — Television Commission [CTRC] is investigating the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation [CBC] and the federal cabinet is studying the CRTC. On top of all this is the question of television's role in the separatism controversy.

In Ontario the La Marsh Commission recently concluded a massive investigation into the issue of violence in the media. The spring "Alumni Times" offered a look at some of the research done for the La Marsh Commission by U. of W. professors. Television again took some thumping.

*Is television salvageable? One of the most prolific producers of educational television in the world says yes. The Ontario Educational Communications Authority [OECA], TV Ontario, takes the medium to the schools of the province and as well offers a menu of cultural and educational programming available on most home television sets. You didn't know it was there? TV Ontario confesses that it's hard bucking "Maude" and "M*A*S*H". But the choice is available.*

TV Ontario staffers Richard Howard and Peter Roach are currently working on a teacher's guide to the program "Witness to Yesterday". Richard and Peter take us into "Witness to Yesterday" in this article prepared especially for "Alumni Times" readers.

Television simulates life. It confronts us with shifting, complex images, patterns of sound. Its message is in the synthesis. TV's value varies with the range of response it manages to wring from the viewer.

Not infrequently, the television programs that score highest in this respect are those not designed specifically for structured educational use. Let's take the historical interview series "Witness to Yesterday" as an example. With a fine disregard for the niceties of the school curriculum, host Patrick Watson soothes, coaxes, challenges and snares some of the most intriguing figures in human history into revelations of character and motives that most of them would not have revealed to their contemporaries — and not, of course, in front of a television camera.

We watch the maligned Lucretia Borgia and Emma Goldman setting the record straight, Bernard Shaw and the Iron Duke of Wellington on their hobbyhorses, and such wildly diverse personalities as Rasputin and an Egyptian Pharaoh on religion and society. We can almost reach out to touch them. We do indeed measure them. We register their voices and translate their facial expressions.

What we are seeing, of course, is not Norman Bethune or William Shakespeare at all, but Donald Sutherland and Barry Morse offering us their art in a series of rich impostures supported by diligent scripting and research; a fantasy fulfilment.

This is a high-gloss learning experience. Viewers are privileged to sit in on the kind of human exchange that is one of the truly engrossing aspects of the world to which they belong. And this conversational art comes to them with an informational pretext — or rather, pretexts, for viewers can absorb realities of history, character and drama all at one time.

To approach television as a learning tool without some grasp of the nature of the medium, to come to it as if it were a kind of electronic book, can be disastrous.

The teachers using "Witness to Yesterday" in classrooms must be flexible to encourage the fullest range of response from their students. They will be cast much more as facilitators, much less as the repository of all knowledge. They will work much more behind the scenes, while encouraging a marked degree of student participation. But they will be using television as it is meant to be used. By careful selection of programs and creative, directed questioning, teachers can achieve solid learning objectives.

Through watching the interviews and going on to research, students become aware of the historian's method of sifting data, weighing points of view, and coming to tentative conclusions. This historian's model is also a model for organizing general experience.

For any examination of humanity and society, the "Witness to Yesterday" series is a rich source of character and motivation study. Basic to the historical acts of each guest, as to the present acts of each student, is his or her relation to the social environment. Norman Bethune exhibits strong and reasoned reactions to the times lived in, reactions that will spark discussion even among students unfamiliar with those times.

Witness to Yesterday was not created exclusively for classroom presentation. Students are sophisticated and critical viewers. So dramatic quality has to be high. For this reason the program is broadcast to general viewers as well. Perhaps the basic attractiveness to all viewers is that the program starts with people. The human issues come out in a highly animated narrative. A bright context is created for learning in association with intelligent teaching. Or the opportunity is there too for the intellectual viewer who prefers something a mite more sophisticated than Archie hollering at Edith.

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU THAT WINDSOR IS THE BEGINNING OF CANADA?

It's true.

Last year more than ten million visitors to Canada entered Windsor first. The largest Canadian city on the International border. We think this and other facts about our city are worth talking about.

You should, too.

You see, our job is promoting Windsor. Bringing people together through Tourism and Conventions. We don't hesitate to boast about our parks and shops, our hotels and nightlife. And the unique mix of cultural lifestyles that shape our city's personality. We advertise in national magazines and distribute thousands of brochures throughout Canada, the U.S. . . . sometimes the World! And it's all about Windsor.

Most visitors are easily impressed, and that's why they will remember friendly, positive people who know about their city. And that's reason enough for all of us to start talking about what we have . . . and being aware of our potential.

If you find it difficult at first, we'll get you started with all the facts worth talking about.

Let's talk it up . . . together!

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

To All of our Alumni:

I bring you warmest personal greetings in this our first issue of the Alumni Times for 1977, and express the sincere hope that, for you and your loved ones, this may be one of the finest years yet.

Notwithstanding a traffic-stopping snow storm on December 3rd, the great Annual Christmas Party at the Royal York was a tremendous success. Leo Larocque and his colleagues outdid themselves in extending hospitality to the remarkable crowd of enthusiastic Alumni (including our esteemed special guest Reverend Eugene C. LeBel, first president of the University of Windsor) who came through the blizzard from Guelph, Windsor, Hamilton, Burlington, Oakville, Waterloo, Kitchener, Barrie, Ottawa, Oshawa and, of course, from greater Toronto.

"When will we do this again?" our Alumni are asking. Of course, there is next year's party at the Royal York - Friday, December 2, 1977. This will be the best Christmas Party ever... exciting details to follow later...and in the meantime...? Chapter events are in the planning stages for Sudbury, Burlington/Hamilton, Ottawa, Sarnia and Rochester.

Kitchener/Waterloo Alumni, with Don Kasta as host, are holding a special get together with Dr. Paul Thomas in connection with the January 29th Lancer basketball game in Waterloo.

The Event of this season will be the SPRING FESTIVAL DINNER PARTY planned for Saturday, April 16th at the University of Windsor campus. This delightful occasion will make up for our disappointment in the cancellation of our last Homecoming, made necessary because of unsettled labour conditions at that time. We will be sending you full details very shortly and hope that you will make every effort to come.

We miss Gabe DeLuca, our former director of Alumni Affairs. Gabe has launched into the world of private business and we wish him well indeed. Gabe made a very large contribution to the mailing and information system aspect of our Alumni operation. It is hoped that a suitable successor to Mr. DeLuca will be named in the near future.

Miss Darlene Chakmak, a senior in Honours English Language and Literature at the University of Windsor, has rendered invaluable editorial and layout assistance for this issue of the Times. Thank you Darlene.

If you have not already responded to our contact concerning membership in the Association, I do trust that I may hear from you this week.

We need each other in 1977.

Cordially,

Paul T. Holliday

CAN-AM '76: A SYNOPSIS

The 1976 Canadian-American Seminar, focusing on the problems of the health care delivery systems in North America, drew a record audience this year.

The immediacy and gravity of the issue were the reasons for that crowd, which heard experts debate the causes behind the escalating costs of health care, and the growing threat of inefficiency in the system.

The speakers pinpointed some key situations which they felt must be corrected in order to avert a crisis. Health care responsibilities, for example, should clearly be placed at the local level. Although district health councils do exist in Ontario, they do not permit patients and medical practitioners adequate input to the system. Increased communication among government officials, doctors and citizens, they stressed, is imperative.

The current system of funding hospital care and doctors' fees, it was felt, has become obsolete. While the idea of a national health care scheme was advocated by both Canadian and American speakers, they all recognized that the government had at times failed in the delivery of high quality health care. Health care problems have arisen partially out of the conflicts which exist between the various sectors of the system.

It was concluded that those who attempt to correct the problems in the health care system should understand the need for preventive medicine, and should finance it adequately. Educating the public on how to prevent sickness has become as important as treating sickness itself.

Complete details of the Eighteenth Canadian American Seminar will be forthcoming in the next issue of the Times.

PRESIDENT LEDDY ANNOUNCES RETIREMENT

Dr. J. F. Leddy, President and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Windsor since 1964, has indicated to the Board of Governors that he plans to retire in 1978, when he has reached the regular age of retirement for members of the University staff, the Chairman of the Board of Governors, Walter L. McGregor announced in April.

Commenting, Mr. McGregor said:

"Since Dr. Leddy's invaluable services to the University and the community will continue for a further two years, there will be many other opportunities to express our appreciation. But, as the date of retirement is now public, I would like to say, on behalf of the Board of Governors of the University of Windsor, that Dr. Leddy's great contribution is well recognized and that we on the Board approach with regret the day two years from now when the University will lose his outstanding academic and administrative services.

John Francis Leddy, O.C., D.Phil., D.Litt., D.esL., LL.D., D.C.L., will have served as President of the University of Windsor for 14 of the 15 years of the University's history when he retires. He is the University's second president. The Rev. Eugene Carlisle LeBel, C.S.B., C.D., LL.D., served the initial year of the University's incorporation.

The 12 years of Dr. Leddy's presidency to date have seen rapid growth and solid development at the University of Windsor under his guidance. Full time enrolment has grown from 1,800 to 7,400 in that period, with a full academic staff of 500.

With this enrolment has come a notable expansion in educational opportunities offered at the University. Among additions of faculties, schools and departments during Dr. Leddy's tenure have been Law, Social Work, Education, Human Kinetics, Computer Science, Fine Arts, Music, Drama, and the general expansion of Graduate Studies which has brought a commensurate increase in research grants and scholarships.

Concern for the provision of a maximum in educational opportunity brought a heavy emphasis on extension programs in Windsor, and lately in Chatham, Leamington and Sarnia.

To house this remarkable university development, the University has changed the face of the campus with the construction of some 20 additional buildings during Dr. Leddy's tenure.

The University community and the Alumni Family will miss our President and his charming wife very much indeed.

President and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Windsor*

EXPANSION SLATED FOR SPRING

Architectural model of new business building . . .

Construction on two major building projects — worth approximately $5,000,000 — will get under way this spring at the University of Windsor, in response to the ever-increasing demands for space.

The announcement was made late in November.

One, a new biology building valued at $2,500,000, will actually be an addition to the current on-campus structure. The other project, to house the Faculty of Business Administration, will be located on property now owned by the University, on Sunset Avenue just north of Fanchette. Costs for the business building are estimated at $2,750,000.

The new biology complex will be four storeys high. Its 22,000 square feet of space will be devoted to laboratories, classrooms, and office facilities. The consultant for the project is Wintec Corporation Limited, in association with Johnson-McWhinnie Architects.

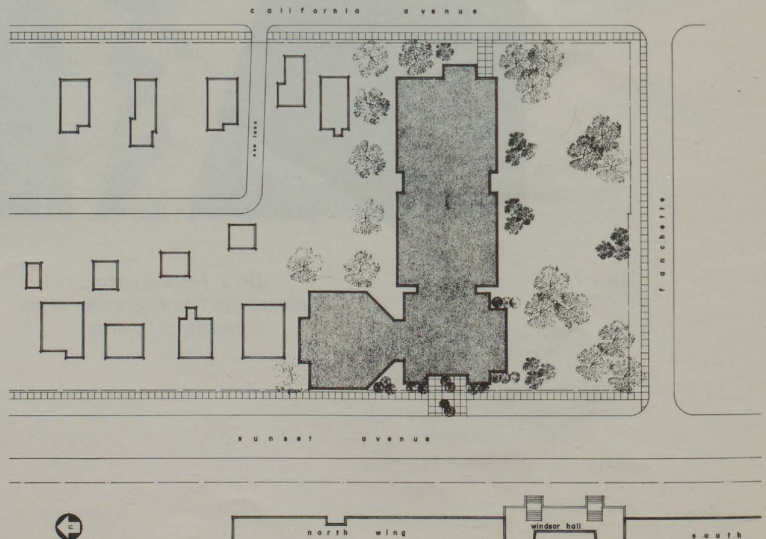

The L-shaped office-classroom building for the Faculty of Business Administration is a response to the mushrooming demand for courses, and will also free up space for other hard-pressed departments. Its 51,000 square feet of space will be set in a fully landscaped site, and in such a way as to direct pedestrian flow inward to the campus. Architects for the project are Langlois-Jordan Associated Architects of Windsor and Chatham.

Completion of the two projects is expected by summer of 1978, in time to handle enrolments for the fall term of that year.

Basic funding for the buildings will come from "Program 25 for Today", monies already raised through the generosity of the people and firms of the Windsor area, and across Canada.

DR. PAUL THOMAS: "FITNESS IS CATHARSIS"

A Renaissance man of sport and athletics is Dr. Paul Thomas of the University of Windsor's Department of Human Kinetics.

This soft-spoken, happy warrior of the basketball court is known locally and internationally to all kinds of people for all kinds of reasons. Non-athletes probably know him best as the man who makes them fit and stops them from smoking — while they enjoy the process. The sport world knows him as an Olympic and intercollegiate coach. The injured are grateful for this therapy, and his colleagues, both on and off campus, recognize his competence and research.

How does he do it? The enthusiasm of a good man living a good life powers the ongoing achievements of a considerable career.

Someone unwittingly says to Dr. Thomas, "I really should be doing something about jogging," and he replies: "Seven o'clock Monday morning, and I'll be there," and he is, taking as much joy in the modest achievements as if they were his own . . . as if he did not have a full professional schedule to cope with beyond this friendly help.

This is not to depict him as a sort of St. Francis of the locker room. He knows when to come on strong. The athlete who disappoints himself or Dr. Thomas, or the referee with a lack of charity or clarity of vision soon discovers that side.

As a coach — apart from his efforts with the perennially strong and frequently champion Lancers — he has had other noteworthy basketball achievements. In 1973, he coached the Canadian National Team at the Moscow World University Games to a fourth place. The year before, he was entrusted with the Canadian National 'B' Team on a goodwill tour of China, a major responsibility both on and off the court.

Many still remember the Tillsonburg "Livingstons" of 1952, the senior men's champions, and the Canadian Olympic Team that went to Helsinki that year, under the direction of the youngest Olympic coach ever — one Paul Thomas. Two years later, he was at the helm of the national champion "Nortown Tri-Bells"

As a teacher-coach, Dr. Thomas has been involved in more than 200 clinics

and workshops, apart from his formal teaching career.

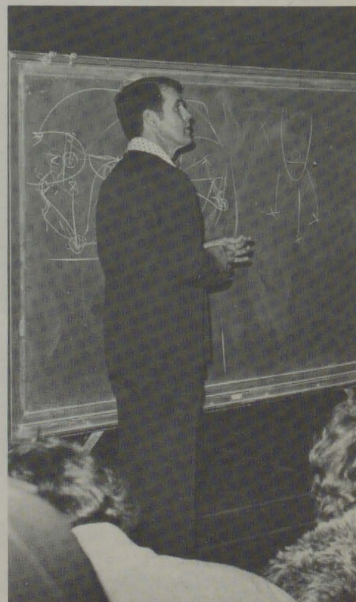

What is the worst part of coaching? Not, as the spectator or even the player expects, the defeat. It is "telling someone he didn't make the team."

What is the worst part of teaching? "The only bad thing about teaching is grading . . . and the big classes. I hate to just stand up there and lecture." The team spirit of the coach, the necessary sense of interaction, carries over into the role of instructor. He remembers his best classes as those that exceeded the two-hour limit, where students finally grudgingly left, still debating their way down the hall.

A visit to Dr. Thomas' office should be the interview initiation rite for every rookie reporter. First of all, his hospitality, sense of humour, and raconteur's skill are unfailing. And second, the global decor of the room brings to life the stories of his career.

A Czechoslovakian silk pennant, labelled "Pre-Olympic Men's Qualifying Tournament" hangs next to what looks like a normal basketball, until one gets close enough to read the Chinese lettering ("What does that mean in English?" "Oh . . . probably 'basketball'"). On the walls free of shelves and filing cabinets are an Olympic Club Canada certificate, and a painting of a basketball game in progress. The painting, Dr. Thomas explains, was the artwork and gift of a woman whose husband had suffered a stroke, and whom he had helped in therapy.

A telephone call cuts into the interview. An ex-student wants to let his former professor and coach know that he will be getting married this summer. Dr. Thomas is delighted, but he has to know: has the prospective groom chosen a bride yet? Satisfied that this business detail has been decided, he finishes the call and apologizes for the interruption. He explains how important it is to keep in touch with his ex-Lancers, with whom he corresponds regularly.

During the call, there is time to look at a bulletin board crowded with clippings and messages from students. Students obviously provide much of the office's through traffic. That is why the white things on the blackboard ledge are Scotch mints instead of chalk. That is why Dr. Thomas, an anti-smoker of missionary zeal, leaves them there.

Every question triggers an intriguing anecdote. Then follow the grin and the chuckle: "I don't know . . . Can you really use that one?"

One question that definitely does not induce a smile is whether or not the latest revival of interest in fitness is a fad. The response is intense disbelief: "You're kidding me . . . you know it isn't a fad!"

Neither is it anything mundane as a physical necessity, Dr. Thomas explains. "It's a catharsis."

To illustrate his point, Dr. Thomas tells about the middle-aged doctor who approached him for a simple fitness routine, and wound up with a daily badminton programme. His face lights up when he describes how the wrinkles and worry lines, the years themselves left the doctor's face while he was playing. One day, Dr. Thomas happened to meet the doctor's receptionist, who asked him, "What have you done to that man?" When he asked why, she confirmed the minor miracle: "He spoke to me this morning."

On the topic of research and publication, Dr. Thomas passes quickly over the fitness research he did for the RCAF, and the United States Navy, among others. The best story, he gently prods, is the one about the book he wrote with Ezra Wyeth, The Lawn Bowler's Handbook.

Dr. Thomas had written an article on lawn bowling from a biomechanical point of view, a perspective which requires no experience in the game. He had none. One article led to another, and each led to inquiries and responses from around the world. Finally, at the request of Wyeth, a world class bowler, a book was written which drew upon the articles. The man who had never played a game of lawn bowl had co-authored a book on the subject which was received with acclaim and interest. Not only that, he designed a successful on-the-spot version of the game for a woman with a polio-stricken leg at a clinic in Toronto. Someday, he remarks with a grin, he really must have a try at the game.

Mention the word photo, and he pulls out an amply filled envelope. There are shots of Dr. Thomas teaching at clinics, coaching on the court, and participating on the court in a spirited game of wheelchair basketball. One photo is especially interesting. How is it he comes to keep company with royalty?

Coaching, like rank, has its privileges, Dr. Thomas explains. At the Olympic Games in Helsinki, in a single level court-bleachers, the man with the coach's crest on his jacket has little difficulty moving to the front lines for a better view. That is exactly what he did. Everything was fine until he noticed that the focus of attention had shifted from the floor to his face. After asking why, he was graciously offered the explanation by a neighbouring spectator: "I think it has something to do with the fact that the Duke of Edinburgh is sitting behind you."

A European paparazzi type, one of the infamous breed that charges through the nose for his photos, chased after Dr. Thomas later to deliver the famous shot, all the more impressive because it was a gift.

What is Paul Thomas doing now? He is involved in his teaching, his coaching, and various therapy projects. He is interested in the special problems of athletes. The doctor who treats serious ailments day in and day out, he explains, hasn't the time or frame of mind for the relatively petty complaint of the runner whose leg aches after 22 miles. Apparently Dr. Thomas has both.

Dr. Paul Thomas plugs in a cassette player, and plays a little of one of his own jazz compositions. How about the two grinning cherubs in the photo on the crowded shelf . . . his children? He has three. "All athletes," he assures. No doubt.

IN GEOGRAPHY:

TEACHING AWARDS WINNER

Dr. Alan Trenhaile of the University of Windsor's Geography Department was among the latest group of recipients of the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations Teaching Awards.

The awards were presented last May by the Hon. Harry C. Parrott, Minister of Colleges and Universities, at a ceremony at McMaster University.

The nomination of Professor Trenhaile by the Department Chairman was supported by both undergraduate and graduate students. Professor Trenhaile has consistently enjoyed the highest ratings in the Department on the annual student evaluation of courses.

Twenty awards were presented during the ceremony (the maximum number given in any one year) with two each going to Carleton, Guelph, McMaster, Ottawa, Toronto and Glendon College, three to York, four to Western, and one to the University of Windsor.

The awards took the form of citations and original works of art by Canadian artist Sheila Maki.

RESEARCH IN MOSCOW

Dr. Ihor Stebelsky of the University's Department of Geography has recently returned from a research trip to Moscow, USSR (Sept. 13 — Oct. 6).

The journey, funded by the governments of Canada and the USSR under the auspices of the Canada Council and the Soviet Academy of Sciences exchange agreement, made it possible for Dr. Stebelsky to follow up his research of Soviet agricultural land resources.

Dr. Stebelsky visited a number of Soviet institutes, consulted with leading scientists, and had the opportunity to gather additional printed information.

His visits included the Institute of Geography of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR (his host institution), the Faculty of Geography at Moscow State University, the Institute of Land Studies of the Ministry of Agriculture, the Dokuchaev Soil Institute, the Moscow Timiryazev Agricultural Academy, and the Council for the study of the Productive Forces of the USSR.

In return, he delivered a slide-illustrated seminar (in Russian) on the agriculture of Southwestern Ontario at the Institute of Geography.

In addition, Professor Stebelsky visited the Institute of Geography Library, the Lenin Library (one of the largest public depositories in the world), and was granted permission to use the Ministry of Agriculture Library, whose use is generally restricted to the Ministry personnel and selected scientific community.

W.R. MITCHELL TO RETIRE

The retirement of W.R. Mitchell, Vice-President Administration of the University of Windsor for the past 10 years, will take place on August 31, 1977.

Mr. Mitchell will have achieved the age of 65. He joined the staff at the University as Vice-President Administration on January 1, 1967, and has guided and developed the non-academic staff through a decade of rapid university expansion.

"While we have some time to go enjoying his services, and are hopeful of his continuing informal association after his retirement, I cannot let this preliminary announcement be made without paying tribute to Mr. Mitchell's selfless and effective service to the University of Windsor," stated Dr. J. F. Leddy, President of the University. "He has brought loyalty, judgment, and great skill to his office, and to the benefit of the University."

Born in Winnipeg, Mr. Mitchell graduated cum laude from the University of Manitoba in 1934 with a Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering. Before graduation, he was hired by the Dominion Steel Company of Canada, and spent 33 years in the steel industry. He was general manager of the corporation's Canadian Bridge Division at the time he joined the University.

TODGHAM MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP FUND

A $20,000 scholarship fund has been established in the Faculty of Business Administration at the University of Windsor in memory of Ronald W. Todgham, former president of Chrysler Canada Ltd. and a governor of the University of Windsor.

The gift is the result of the generosity of Chrysler Canada Ltd. dealers, who subscribed the bulk of it, and of the Todgham family. The funds have been turned over to the University by Mrs. Ron Todgham.

The scholarship will be open to the children of Chrysler Canada Ltd. dealers, dealer employees and their children and to employees of Chrysler Canada Ltd. and their children.

The fund is to be administered by the Senior Vice-President of the University, Dr. Frank DeMarco, who, in consultation with the Dean of the Faculty of Business Administration, Dr. Michael Zin, will make recommendations for the awarding of scholarships to the University of Windsor Scholarship Committee. The fund is open-ended and is open to further contributions.

Commenting on the establishment of the fund, the President of the University, Dr. J.F. Leddy, declared:

"The University is most grateful and honoured to be the location of such a fitting memorial to Ron Todgham. His many contributions of time and effort and advice and his friendship to the University of Windsor will be long remembered here. We are particularly pleased that Chrysler Canada Ltd. dealers across Canada played such an important role in establishing of such a suitable memorial to Ron Todgham.

On his part, Dean Zin stated:

"I join the over 2,000 full and part-time students and the 70 full and part-time faculty and staff members in expressing our appreciation to both the Chrysler Family and to Mrs. Ron Todgham and her sons, Richard and Douglas on the occasion of establishment of the $20,000 Ron Todgham Memorial Scholarship Fund. Mr. Todgham was a dear friend not only of the University but of the Faculty of Business Administration."

A Good Time to Review THE REVIEW

The new year is a particularly good time to take a look at the UNIVERSITY OF WINDSOR REVIEW and try to evaluate its role on the literary scene, both on and off campus.

The scholarly journal has survived the vagaries of the publishing business, the whims of the reading public, and the rigours of escalating costs — for a full 11 years. More remarkable yet, it maintains a standard of literary excellence that “grander” publications might envy.

Its success is due, in large part, to the skills and instincts of Gene McNamara, who has edited the Review since its inception, and still manages to ferret out good material from both established and new authors all over the continent.

Because Dr. McNamara is known primarily as a poet, it comes as no surprise that the Review has for so long offered poetry that is unusual, sometimes even unforgettable. Many subscribers have indicated that it would be worth the price, if for the poetry alone.

The Review has also offered impressive fiction. It has published works by campus-based author Joyce Carol Oates, in addition to those of other less well known but gifted writers.

Art Editor Evelyn McLean, the University's Dean of Women, offers in the current issue the second of two articles in a series dealing with the Radell Studios of Detroit . . . an example of how art specials have added flavour to the Review over the years.

This issue also provides an in-depth analysis of the works of Morley Callaghan, so that students and readers alike can enjoy a new insight into his talent. Film buffs can sharpen their critical powers with Paul McGlynn, while book enthusiasts can enjoy reviews by campus figures John Ditsky, Samuel Stollman and Adrian Van Den Hoven.

Criticisms, lectures and articles of all kinds enrich the substance and value of the Review, as it continues its tradition of a broad literary spectrum to satisfy a broad array of reading tastes.

Alumni are reminded that publications such as the Review — costly to produce and easy to kill — are dependent on the support of those who attended and remember the University. The Review is, in fact, much like that education; it provides not only memories from yesterday and enjoyment for today, but a future investment.

REV. KENNEDY APPOINTED

The Reverend Dr. Leonard A. Kennedy, C.S.B. of the Department of Philosophy, has been appointed Principal of St. Thomas More College, Saskatoon.

Father Kennedy, currently Professor in the Department of Philosophy, has been at the University of Windsor for 13 years. During three of those years, he served as President of Assumption University.

He will assume his new duties on July 1 of this year.

Father Kennedy will be greatly missed at the University of Windsor, and, as a former Director of the Alumni Association, by his many alumni friends.
